It seems that as hitters we have always been good pitchers or infielders around here, anyway. In 45 years we have had but 12 men among the first three sluggers of the National league, and only three men among the first three hitters of the American league in 11 years. Such pounding

The use of Everwear Aluminum is a kind of food insurance, affording absolute protection against contamination from cooking vessels. It is economical, too, because Everwear Aluminum cannot chip or crack and needs no renewing. Foods cannot be "scorched" in an Everwear Aluminum vessel, nor will the vessel itself be injured if it should be allowed to "boil dry."

The fielder in question has been in the major leagues only a few years, yet he is looked on us one of the best in the business. He plays on a club that cause mighty color to winning the pennant last year.

During spring practice, the manaser of the club in question noticed that the outflielder was a very clever fellow at trapping fly balls. It was as easy for him to judge a fly ball and take it on the first short bound as to catch it, in the ordinary way. One day, while watching the fielder practice this stunt, a scheme occurred to the manager which he believed might help out at certain stages of the game. In the little yellow pamphlet issued recently by the "Anti-Ring" they claim that during 1910 insurance rates were lower than they are today by from 25 to 150 per cent, so let's compare them and see:

1910.	1914.

This could be continued throughout the schedule, and we would find that we are now enjoying lower insurance than we were at that time. In Saturday's Herald, Jan. 20th, 1915, they give the following comparisons:
